

Barrack Obama

In August 2006, the University of Nairobi was privileged to host the then Illinois Senators and the current U.S. President, Barrack Obama.

President Obama delivered a powerful lecture at Taifa Hall to an audience that included students, scholars and officials from the American Embassy and top University management led by the Chancellor, Dr. Joseph Wanjui.

In his lecture titled "An Honest Government, A Hopeful Future," he warned Kenyans about corruption, noting that it erodes the state from inside out, sickening the justice system until there is no justice to be found.

Before delivering his lecture, Obama planted a commemorative tree in the University.
